I love this game and I definitely recomend it!. Though I do think this is a good game fundamentally it is flawed. The concept is pretty cool. Here are my thoughts and make your own decision. 1. It should be more options for buildings, there are other methods of green energy other than solar and wind, so that should be expanded upon (unless it occurs in later levels im still just playing and going). 2. The Purification vs. Pollution mechanic needs to be elaborated on, trees are pretty crappy at removing pollution and the pollution can accumulate really really fast! There should be options to eliminate it better. 3. Nice weather and daytime mechanic for the green energy. But the night time lasts pretty long compared to day time so take that as you will. 4. Pollution is difficult to control even on the easiest settings, this relates to #2 but still. There should be a gauge to allow the player to see the balance between how you pollute vs how you repair the environment.. There's more strategy in some free to play, browser-based "clicker" games out there. The music is chirpy and annoying for a game that requires long and considerate attention in a gaming session. Mechanics are interesting albeit shallow, also trees cost money over time to own, which is not intuitive and not obviously explained. There are 5 maps to play on, but you can plumb the depths of the gameplay on a play-through on the easiest settings of the first map, then proceed to the hardest settings on the last (mars) map and touch on everything there is to see while skipping the middle 3 maps. TL;DR Not a waste of time, but not really worth it either.. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to earn $1,000,000, while not destroying the world in the process. Build power plants and manage your pollution levels; if your pollution levels get out of hand, sandworms and meteors will come to destroy your hard work. There is no fast-forward, so all gameplay is real-time. This isn't so bad as most reviewers make it out to seem, as all you have to do is build a power grid with sustainable pollution levels, and then let the simulation run. I managed to earn $1,000,000 in about 40 minutes, so the amount of time you have to let the simulation run is trivial. Just turn it on in the background and let the money pile up. I enjoyed this game. It's a casual simulation game, and you really don't have to worry about enemies destroying your progress unless you build an unsustainable power grid.. sigh * - The price for this game should be lowered to 99 cents, because this is a type of game where you would be willing to pay 99 cents or even 49 cents, not 4,99. -- Probably wants it's 100 dollar placement money back on STEAM, but 4,99 is too much! + This game is not THAT bad. The goal is set, you have to earn 1,000,000 dollars. You can do it the polluting way, which causes troubles with nature and something weird, but okaayyy. Or you do it with solar and wind energy, the yield of getting cash is very, very low and it takes an eternity to get to that 1,000,000 dollars, but at least you are not polluting the lands. Like the system works. This game works like it promises. Like you lay down pavements to prevent oil leakage and place down trees that purifies the land, you only have to do it very quickly before that groundpenis takes it away again, which costs you a lot of money. + Graphical wise, looks good, little animations, not too fancy. Like if you had trucks moving over the place would be interesting. - Sadly, not too technically and building options are very limited. Which makes this game a little bit boring. Like you have a choice between; solar, wind, oil or gas. But I miss a lot of features, like power distribution, waterpipes, cooling systems, but this game is too simplistic. I should not have had high hopes. + Different types of difficulty modes, there are several pieces of land to choose from, even the moon (that one is the hardest - I wonder why. guess I will never know, because I am not going to waste my time with doing something which I know this is a pollution.) xD - Yes I use "." a lot when I got a 50/50 game here on which I am writing my personal opinion about. Like, this game could be good, if it had more options and a lower price. But sorry, I cannot recommend this game. If you want to play something similar like this, search for "reactor idle" and "factory idle" on the website from Kongregate. They are free to play, have more to offer and are more fun. You will return for those games almost every day.. This is an incredible game, very fun and great artwork. It's a great challenge, and would love to see an editor for custom buildings etc. 9/10 would play. I find it hilarious that people downvote the review just because its positive. Get a life.. Tough game, a definite challenge on harder levels!. Terrible. Go play Cookie Clicker instead.. To be honest I kind of feel cheated by this game. I bought not sure what to expect and loaded it up thinking little building sim with cute graphics. When all I got was what was essentially a one screen flash game I was more than just a little disappointed. I think this could best be summed up by an impulse buy without doing the proper research and I hope to save other people from that impulse. If you're looking for what is essentially a phone or flash game this game might tickle your fancy. If you're looking for any kind of depth or strategy.might want to look elsewhere.. Very bad Idle game.
